

Fraternal Health & Safety Initiative

Active Shooter/Killer Preparedness Discussion Questions

1. When running, what did Ken say about the positioning of your hands?
2. Does anyone remember what “prairie-dogging” is? Why it is not a good idea?
3. As a fraternity/sorority member, how does the idea of running knowing you are leaving others behind make you feel given we spend a lot of time talking about how we are supposed to take care of and support each other?
4. What were some of the points raised about barricading yourself in?
5. As a fraternity/sorority member, how would you respond if when barricaded you heard someone outside pleading to get in? What if it were a brother/sister?
6. Would it make a difference if you were in a room by yourself, versus with others?
7. What were some of the techniques that Ken covered in the fight section?
8. As a fraternity/sorority member how does the idea of engaging in violence, or fighting, make you feel? Is this realistic for you personally?
9. If the attacker was a female, would it change how you approached the situation?
10. Ken also made a point that everyone should get in the habit of examining any buildings they frequent to know the exits. In particular, he shared it is always a good practice to check out new surroundings for the exits.
 - a. What are your thoughts about the information shared?
 - b. Is this something that as a group we can agree needs to be part of our event planning? Any ideas on how we could best do this?
11. As a fraternity/sorority, how are we prepared to act if one of our members is showing any of the Pre-Attack Indicators (PAIN) as warning signs?
12. Any other questions or thoughts anybody wishes to share?

Fraternal Health & Safety Initiative

Active Shooter/Killer Preparedness Discussion Questions

1. When running, what did Ken say about the positioning of your hands?
2. Does anyone remember what “prairie-dogging” is? Why it is not a good idea?
3. As a fraternity/sorority member, how does the idea of running knowing you are leaving others behind make you feel given we spend a lot of time talking about how we are supposed to take care of and support each other?
4. What were some of the points raised about barricading yourself in?
5. As a fraternity/sorority member, how would you respond if when barricaded you heard someone outside pleading to get in? What if it were a brother/sister?
6. Would it make a difference if you were in a room by yourself, versus with others?
7. What were some of the techniques that Ken covered in the fight section?
8. As a fraternity/sorority member how does the idea of engaging in violence, or fighting, make you feel? Is this realistic for you personally?
9. If the attacker was a female, would it change how you approached the situation?
10. Ken also made a point that everyone should get in the habit of examining any buildings they frequent to know the exits. In particular, he shared it is always a good practice to check out new surroundings for the exits.
 - a. What are your thoughts about the information shared?
 - b. Is this something that as a group we can agree needs to be part of our event planning? Any ideas on how we could best do this?
11. As a fraternity/sorority, how are we prepared to act if one of our members is showing any of the Pre-Attack Indicators (PAIN) as warning signs?
12. Any other questions or thoughts anybody wishes to share?